Dear Team,

I have not entered the branch under the influence of alcohol, nor have I knowingly permitted anyone to consume alcohol in the office. Auditing is scheduled to begin here on Monday; I was on leave the preceding Saturday and Sunday. When I left the office on Friday evening, I did not see any such alcohol bottle here. Two staff members stayed here over the weekend, and I When I asked them about this, I didn't get a clear answer. I have only been in charge here for three months. I am well aware that alcohol consumption was taking place here even before I arrived; I have personally noticed the presence of bottles. Auditors have pointed this out in the past as well. How do liquor bottles—which were not here on Friday evening—end up in the branch by Monday morning? It is a matter that needs to be clearly verified; on what basis, then, is it being alleged that I entered the branch after consuming alcohol while on duty, or that I consumed alcohol inside the branch? I assure you that I have not consumed alcohol inside the branch, nor would I ever allow anyone else to do so
